Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses by Hackney Council

Issue 364 5 October

Alice Burke has been named the Daily Mirror's 'Pride of Britain Local Hero' for her tireless work in making the Nightingale Estate a safer place to live

PRIDE OF HACKNEY

A HACKNEY great-grandmother, Alice Burke, was named the Daily Mirror's 'Pride of Britain Local Hero' for her brave and tireless fight against crime.

Alice, 78, was presented with the award by Barbara Windsor at a star-studded ceremony at the Grosvenor Park Hotel, in Mayfair, on 28 September.

She won because of her work to transform the Nightingale Estate, in E5, where she moved to raise her three daughters with her husband, Owen, in 1975. By the mid-1980s, she said, the estate was overrun with gangs, drug dealers and prostitution.

Alice recalls: "You didn't want to be outside for very long unless you were with somebody else because it was frightening."

Walking home with her daughters one evening she was mugged. That, she said, was the turning point: "I just wanted to live somewhere where my children and grandchildren could be safe. It was that simple."

In 1993, she helped set up Nightingale Tenants' and Residents' Association and campaigned so ceaselessly against crime that threats were made against her life. She was shouted at and bricks were thrown through her car windows. Alice, however, refused to give up.

The Council subsequently launched a regeneration plan on the estate in Hackney Downs, replacing its tower blocks with low rise buildings, creating more open spaces and putting in better street lighting. Between 2008 and 2013, the estate saw a 44 per cent decrease in crime.

Alice, a former auxiliary nurse, retired as chair of the housing association three years ago, after 20 years of service, and now serves on the board of Hackney Homes while working with other estates to tackle anti-social behaviour.

She was given a British Empire

Medal in 2012 for her tireless work and was surprised with the news of her recent award live on ITV's 'Good Morning Britain' show.

She was subsequently invited to Downing Street where she had breakfast with the Prime Minister's wife, Samantha Cameron. She is, she said, 'still a bit shell shocked'.

Alice is most proud, however, of what's happened at home, on the Nightingale Estate. She said: "Now people talk to one another and smile."

The Daily Mirror's Pride of Britain Awards aired on 1 October, on ITV, at 8pm.

Bishopsgate update

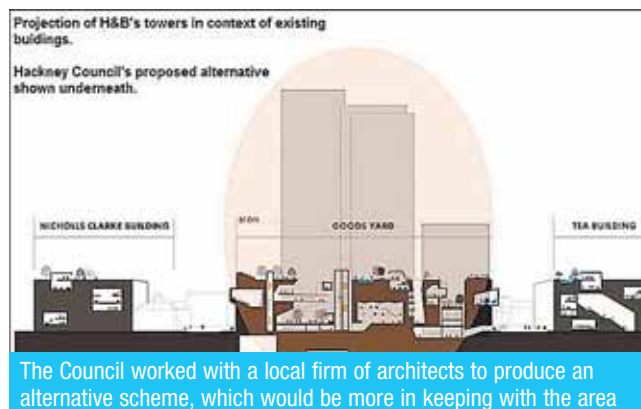

LONDON Mayor Boris Johnson has 'called in' a planning application to develop Bishopsgate Goodsyards, meaning that he, and not Hackney and Tower Hamlets councils, will now rule on the matter.

Plans for the Shoreditch site, which spans both boroughs, include two high-rise blocks of luxury flats, the tallest being 47 storeys and almost 180metres high.

A wide-range of residents, businesses and interest groups have objected to the application since it was first submitted by Hammerson and Ballymore last September, and again when an amended application was submitted in August.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, has also spoken out against the proposals, calling on people to sign an online petition and formally object. Concerns include the height, bulk and quality of the buildings and their impact on the surrounding communities, conservation

“As it stands, this scheme will serve primarily to line the pockets of developers and property investors”

The Council worked with a local firm of architects to produce an alternative scheme, which would be more in keeping with the area areas and character of Shoreditch; the lack of affordable housing; and the type of business space, which could negatively impact on Tech City.

Planners had been assessing the complex application and were expecting to bring it before their councils' planning committees in November.

However, last month Hammerson and Ballymore wrote to Mayor Johnson requesting he take over the application, arguing that the boroughs were not making a decision within a 'reasonable timeframe'. He has agreed to do so.

Mayor Pipe said he was 'disgusted' by the decision, adding: "It shows an outrageous disregard for the local democratic planning process and complete contempt for the residents and businesses of Hackney and Tower Hamlets.

"The developer's arguments was misleading and extremely cynical, and it appears that getting the Mayor to call it in was their strategy all along.

"In no way have Hackney's or Tower Hamlets' planning departments failed in their duties in the treatment of this application. Instead, they've tried very hard to work constructively with the developer.

"As it stands, this scheme will serve primarily to line the pockets of developers and property investors, and is an example of everything that is wrong with the capital's property and development market.

"We will now assess our options going forwards to ensure the full weight of public opinion against this disastrous development is clearly demonstrated."

Details of the process and timing of Mayor Johnson's decision are yet to be confirmed.

News in brief

Run Hackney returns in May

THE Vitality Run Hackney half marathon is set to take over the borough's streets on Sunday, 8 May, next year. Entries for places are now open with an early bird discount of £5. Next year's race is expected to attract up to 15,000 runners and raise money for official event charities: Cancer Research UK, St Joseph's Hospice, Reach Out and Laureus. The 13.1 mile circular route begins and ends in Hackney Marshes and takes in borough landmarks, via Hackney Downs, Hackney Central, Broadway Market, Well Street Common, Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park and Mabley Green. Competitors of all ages and abilities can participate in the fast, closed-road course: from elite athletes to first-time runners.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Run Hackney has quickly become a firm favourite with runners and residents alike. It has a unique, carnival-like atmosphere that really shows East London at its best, and I'm delighted we're able to bring it back for the third year."

BL-NK re-opens in Shoreditch

A 4,500 square foot space designed to support and celebrate local businesses has returned to Hackney.

BL-NK was first set up by the Council in East Road, N1, as a temporary space to support creative and technology companies in nearby Tech City in 2013.

After closing for a year, its new home at 25-27 Curtain Road is bigger – arranged over three floors of versatile floor space – and more ambitious, aiming to cater to businesses as diverse as tech, fashion, retail and financial sectors.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, who launched the venue, said: "BL-NK is purpose-built to support business growth, helping to showcase East London's broad creative and commercial community, while giving entrepreneurs and start-ups much needed affordable workspace.

"This fantastic new venue is ideally positioned to help create opportunities for employment, training and apprenticeships with the introduction of new businesses into the borough."

As well as providing affordable work spaces with free wi-fi in a central location, the site is intended for use as a seminar, meeting and networking events space. BL-NK will act as a platform from which local projects can be promoted to national, and even global, audiences.

A series of events is programmed for the space, and there's a digital art gallery, roof terrace and cafe promoting local produce and suppliers.

The venue, which will be open for five years, is being run at no cost to the taxpayer. Funding will be generated through hiring out the space. Any surplus will be reinvested into supporting local businesses.

The threads of time

Celebrate Black History Month with a series of exhibitions and events, from African textiles to Hackney's links to slavery and its abolition

Hackney c1750, a general view engraved for Harrison's 'History of London'

HACKNEY is set to showcase black history and culture with a two-month festival of exciting events and activities.

Highlights include an exhibition exploring Hackney's historic ties with Africa through fabric and fashion, and a display about the borough's links to slavery and its abolition.

'African Threads Hackney Style' explores 400 years of textile journeys from Africa to the borough. The free exhibition is on at Hackney Museum until 23 January.

'Who Were the Slave-

Owners of Hackney?' looks at a time when the borough was a fashionable, semi-rural area where both abolitionists and wealthy slave-owners lived side by side. The display, which is at Hackney Archives until the end of the year, uses local archives and the Encyclopaedia of British Slave-ownership as reference points.

The programme is part of Black History Month, a nationwide celebration of the contribution of African and Caribbean communities locally and globally.

It features events for all ages, including inspiring guest speakers, such as writer and historian Sandra Agard; music workshops; storytelling; arts and crafts; book launches; and history talks.

Other key events include an evening with Hackney-based artist Yinka Shonibare MBE (booking essential); a rap and poetry workshop at Shoreditch Library; a stroll around Stoke Newington on the trail of the abolitionists; and a collaborative experiment to revisit and re-imagine the Anti-University of East London.

Based in Rivington Street, Shoreditch, in the late 1960s, the Anti-University movement involved iconic figures such as cricket writer and political activist

In the 1600s Hackney, Shoreditch and Stoke Newington were a cluster of small villages. By the 1700s, they were home to wealthy merchants who lived in elegant houses

THE NARROW WAY, HACKNEY
ILLUSTRATIVE PUBLIC REALM IMPROVEMENTS

Bid to upgrade Narrow Way

THE Narrow Way is set to undergo major improvements in a dramatic reimagining of one of the borough's oldest shopping districts.

The multi-million pound rejuvenation of the area, which is among the most architecturally and historically important in Hackney, could see the roadway and footpaths replaced with a striking, pedestrian-friendly surface. This will be designed to encourage more considerate cycling and to attract more customers to shops and businesses.

A new raised junction would realign the once-connected Narrow Way and Clarence Road, continuing the facelift across Dalston Lane, and putting pedestrians at the heart of the project.

New improved crossings are proposed for the junction of Mare Street and Amhurst Road in order to enhance safety for pedestrians and cyclists by slowing motor traffic, and to draw more people from Hackney Central Station to the Narrow Way and Fashion Hub.

“The Narrow Way is one of the most important retail districts in Hackney and has been crying out for revitalising for years”

The proposals also extend to the junction of Graham Road, helping breathe new life further across Hackney Central's retail heartland.

A new public square around the Grade 1 listed St Augustine's Tower, the oldest building in Hackney, is proposed. It will be designed to integrate with the churchyard, maintaining historic features, such as the flagstones, memorials and tombstones.

The Council is now asking residents to have their say on the plans as the project moves to public consultation phase.

Proposals also include: space for outdoor tables and seating; more cycle parking and better seating; improved CCTV; and more trees.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods and Sustainability, said: “The Narrow Way is one of the most important retail districts in Hackney and has been crying out for revitalising for years.

“These exciting plans aim to create a new attractive, accessible, functional and safe urban space that will bring long-lasting benefits for both residents and businesses alike.

“As well as drawing more footfall from Hackney Central station to the area, we believe the new layout will support events and improve life for pedestrians and cyclists.”

The Narrow Way was closed to vehicles last year following a six-month pilot scheme.

Talking about regeneration

Young and old enjoyed fun days at Colville and Kings Crescent estates

RESIDENTS celebrated the end of summer with family fun days on two Hackney estates currently undergoing major redevelopment.

Around 200 people enjoyed the sunshine, music, food and children's activities on 19 September – as well as finding out about new Council homes being built and refurbished at Colville Estate, in Hoxton, and Kings Crescent Estate, in Stoke Newington.

Colville residents met the developer of the third phase of their estate's regeneration, Anthology, which will build two towers of properties for private sale, to help pay for rebuilding all the Council homes for social renting, plus 70 for shared ownership and new community facilities.

Lisa O'Connor, of Kellett House, said: "I've been here for 13 years, and every year they've had fun days. You can see things moving forward, they're knocking down the old buildings."

Colville is being regenerated by the Council over a 15-year period, to replace 435 existing and no longer fit for purpose homes with 925 new ones for social renting, shared ownership and private sale.

The first phase, Bridport House, was completed in 2011, providing 41 homes for social renting, funded by the Council and Greater London Authority.

At Kings Crescent Estate,

"I would be interested in finding out more about the regeneration. I've lived here since I was born, for 21 years" children enjoyed activities from Albion Kids Show and tried their hands at soft sumo wrestling.

Adults, meanwhile, found out more about how existing Council homes are being refurbished and an additional 79 built for social renting, plus 117 for shared ownership, along with properties for private sale in order to help fund the regeneration. Higgins Plc, which has been appointed as developer for the first phase, organised the fun day.

Daniel Nevs, of Datchworth Court, said: "I would be interested in finding out more about the regeneration. I've lived here since I was born, for 21 years. There are a lot of kids that live here, and if there will be things for them to do that will be useful."

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, added: "It's important that we discuss with residents how we're going to deliver high quality, new Council homes for social renting, and it was good to personally see so many people out enjoying the sun and finding out more. Listening to residents it was clear that they are excited about these schemes, keen to know more, and of course have some fun."

'There is nothing stopping you from succeeding in your life'

As a teen Joshua Uwadiae was in a gang. Today he is a successful businessman, entrepreneur and Microsoft spokesperson LIFE is what you make it" says Joshua Uwadiae, a former Hackney gang member and school drop-out who turned his life around to become a Microsoft spokesperson, successful business owner and entrepreneur. All by the age of 21. This is his story.

Born in Islington, Josh moved close to Victoria Park, at the age of 10, with his mother and sister. He made new friends and started mixing with a different group of people.

As time passed, Josh realised he was steadily getting involved with a gang in the area. He recalls: "I kind of joined a gang naturally through meeting friends and growing up together in the same neighbourhood. I also wasn't very close to my Dad, so I looked up to the older guys on the street and the lifestyles they had.

They looked gangster in the same way that characters looked on the computer games I was playing, and in the lyrics of music I was listening to. I wanted to be like them."

Josh was in a gang for three years. He says: "I thought that street life was thrilling and exhilarating, holding a knife and the rest. But I started a fight with a rival gang member whose brother was notoriously violent.

"I was in serious trouble when someone told the guy where I lived, he wasn't the kind of person to push things aside. This was a serious situation."

At around the same time, Josh was expelled from school, at age 15 for, he says: "Embarrassingly trying to flirt with a teacher, but I think it was just a way to get out."

Life was spiralling out of control. But things began to turn around when Josh joined his sisters at a local church group. He muses: "I wasn't very religious and I really struggled to get into it, but then things changed. I found in the church community a lot of help, they mentored me and I started to become a better person."

"If I can make it to where I am today from where I was, others can too"

With the backing of his family, pastor, church mentors and a different outlook on life, Josh began studying IT at BSix College. He says: "I did some work experience at a bank working in the IT department and I found it to be great fun. I knew then that I didn't fancy university and I wanted a job in the IT industry, but I needed the qualifications. So the next step was an apprenticeship."

Josh became an apprentice in 2012 and worked for an e-courier businesses. A year later, he was approached by global technology company Microsoft to become an apprenticeship ambassador.

He recalls: "This was an amazing opportunity for me to share my journey with schools and others about the advantages of becoming an apprentice. What's more, this wasn't just in the UK, I travelled to Brussels in Europe, and Seattle in the United States, for this role."

During his time in America, Josh met business leaders his age who, he says: "Had successfully set-up their own businesses and made it look easy. I'd never seen anything like it. I thought to myself 'I can do this'."

Earlier this year, Josh set up his own business called Superlative Youth, which mentors and helps young people gain the confidence to go on to succeed in education, employment or life in general.

He says: "I want to translate to all the people that I work with the same passion, enthusiasm and energy that I have to make their lives superlative, while championing apprenticeships and the opportunities that exist in the borough.

"If I can make it to where I am today from where I was, others can too."

His advice to anyone who may find themselves in a similar situation to his at age 15, is: "Life is what you make it and I'm a testament to that. There is nothing stopping you from succeeding in your life, but you are responsible. Whatever you do, maximise it."

Say
NO
to plastic bags

Beat the plastic bag charge

From 5 October, all large stores are set to charge 5p for every plastic bag they give out. Hackney retailers are encouraged to sign the Plastic Bag Pledge

A NEW piece of legislation has been introduced across the country to tackle the environmental impact of plastic carrier bags, and the Council has launched a scheme to support it locally.

Almost eight billion plastic carrier bags were given away in Britain last year. That's a total of 68,600 tonnes, 270 every second, or 133 per person.

The environmental damage is substantial. Plastic carrier bags can take up to a 1,000 years to degrade, litter the streets, and maim or kill wildlife. It is estimated, for instance, that 90 per cent of the world's seabirds have pieces of plastic in their gut, while more than five trillion pieces of plastic are floating in the oceans.

To try and reduce plastic bag usage nationally, a new law introduced on 5 October will make it compulsory for large shops to charge 5p for every one they give out. When a similar scheme was introduced in Wales, plastic bag consumption was reduced by 79 per cent in three years, and it is estimated this latest legislation will raise £730million for good causes.

In Hackney, shops across the borough are being invited to join a campaign pledging not to offer plastic bags to customers unless they specifically ask for one.

To sign up, shops should send an e-mail to: recycling.team@hackney.gov.uk, including their name and address. They will then be sent a free pack, including a window sticker and poster to promote the campaign.

News in brief

Parks staff thanked for work to manage green spaces

THE Mayor of Hackney has thanked parks staff for their work to secure the highest-ever number of Green Flags for the borough.

Around 30 Council staff who are responsible for managing and maintaining 58 sites across the borough – including Hackney Marshes, Clissold and Springfield parks – were congratulated by Mayor Jules Pipe after the borough was awarded a further two Green Flags, bringing its total to 19.

Millfields Park, in Clapton, and West Hackney Recreation Ground, in Stoke Newington, were the latest recipients of the UK's top award for parks and green spaces, joining the 17 others which retained their Green Flag status this year.

Plea for residents to not contaminate their recycling with rubbish

Free garden waste collection

Throw nappies in the rubbish

SIGNIFICANT amounts of recycling are being thrown away as waste because it is contaminated in estate collection bins.

Residents are urged to help prevent this by not using communal recycling bins to dispose of items including black refuse sacks, nappies and polystyrene. These belong in the rubbish bin.

If too many of these materials end up in a recycling truck, the whole load has to be thrown away. Currently wastage is around 9 tonnes a week.

Food waste, garden waste, clothes, electrical items and bulky waste should also not be put in communal bins. They can be recycled separately however.

Food waste is collected from doorsteps or at communal food waste bins. There are collection banks across the borough for clothes and electronic equipment. Most homes get free garden waste doorstep collections every two weeks.

There are also four dumps where residents can take all household waste and recycling. These are at 40 Hornsey Street, Islington, N7; South Access Road, Walthamstow, E17; Gateway Road, Leyton, E10; and Park View Road, Tottenham N17.

If bins are unlocked or contain rubbish and other non-recyclable items, e-mail: recycling@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 6688.

And Now: The World!

27–31 October, Hackney Showroom, Amhurst Terrace, E8 2BT

"WE want to be supermodels or get on TV, because otherwise we'll just sit at our computers anonymously hating each other." So says the protagonist of 'And Now: The World!', a darkly comic one woman show opening at Hackney Showroom on 27 October.

OpenWorks Theatre and Company of Angels are producing the English language premiere of this play by Sibylle Berg, who has won much acclaim as an up-and-coming writer in her German homeland.

Jennifer Jackson plays a young feminist in a digital world, provoking the audience into questions including: what happens when you spend more time with your friends online than face to face? And what, exactly, happens to humans when we are overloaded with information?

Win BFI London Film Festival tickets

BACK for its 59th year, the BFI London Film Festival heads to Hackney Picturehouse, from 7 to 18 October, to showcase established and up-and-coming filmmakers from around the globe.

Films vary from shorts and features in comedy and current affairs, to love stories and cult genres. For those who enjoy stories that scrutinise, debate and surprise, there are two films sure to provide excitement:

'Nasty Baby' (15 Oct), starring Kristen Wiig, follows the story of a gay couple about to have their first child with a friend, while facing issues with work and the US immigration services. Expect director Sebastian Silva to play a breathtaking late curve ball, guaranteed to spark debates.

Or catch 'Arianna' (12 Oct), a coming-of-age drama with a twist about a young girl searching for her real sexual identity during a summer trip to the family holiday home on the shores of Lake Bolsano in Italy.

For more info, visit: www.bfi.org.uk/lff

Hackney Today has one pair of tickets to give away for either film. For a chance to win, send a postcard, with your film preference, to: BFI London Film Festival competition, Hackney Today, 1st Floor, Maurice Bishop House, 17 Reading Lane, E8 1NN; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 8 October. All entries must include a name, address and telephone number. Winners will be pulled out of a hat.

Stoke Newington Music Festival

23-25 October, various locations in Stoke Newington

AT the last count, there were 13 music festivals based in Hackney, and that was just the summer ones. The latest edition to the fold, Stoke Newington Music Festival, is taking place in October, when we could all use a wiggle to warm us up. From 23 to 25 October, Stoke Newington's pubs, bars, restaurants, churches and street corners will be hosting live music and performances, from raucous guitars to harmonising trios via hip-hop DJ sets. Most events will be free, with donation buckets present at the venues in order to raise money for Brook, a sexual health charity that runs a condom distribution scheme for young people in Hackney. A special, young people's venue will be established in St Paul's Church on Stoke Newington High Street, with music produced by and for under-18s, showcasing young musical talent and young sound engineers. Once the live sets have packed up, many of the festival's more established venues will also stay open, with specially curated DJ events keeping the musical mayhem going until the early hours. For more info visit: www.stokeymusicfest.com Donations can also be made at any time by texting 'SNMF15 £5' to 70070, to donate £5 to Brook.

Hackney music scholars Iisu Atesogullari and Mia Arthur with MOBO-winning jazz musician and Mayor's Music Fund ambassador Yolanda Brown

By Dila Tumer

TWO Hackney youngsters represented the borough in a prestigious awards ceremony at City Hall.

Mia Arthur, 10, who plays the flute and attends Grasmere Primary School, N16, and Iisu Atesogullari, nine, who plays the violin and goes to Sir Thomas Abney Primary, N16, were awarded a four-year Mayor's Music Scholarship.

They were welcomed to the ceremony on 29 September by MOBO-

“It's great to see how the fund helps young musicians follow their dream and to see how they develop” winning jazz musician Yolanda Brown and the Mayor of London.

Yolanda said: “It's great to see how the fund helps young musicians follow their dream and to see how they develop with their instrument.”

“The scholarship has a positive effect on so many areas of their life, not just music. I believe it is important to have access to creating music and it is wonderful to be involved with this much needed initiative.”

The fund provides scholarships to primary schoolchildren across London. It currently supports 217 talented children to develop their musical potential.

They receive over two hours of music-making and other developmental activities every week, plus lots of opportunities to perform in public and attend concerts and live gigs. Each student also has a personal mentor.

The Mayor's Music Fund also funds collaborations with arts organisations to create innovative projects and give young people, aged seven to 21, the chance to work alongside professional musicians.

Charity SeeAbility wants eye tests in all special schools

HUNDREDS of vulnerable children in Hackney cannot access eye tests, according to new research, despite those with complex learning disabilities or complex needs being 28 times more likely to suffer from serious sight problems than their peers.

The charity SeeAbility is calling on the government to make sight tests available in every special school in England after the research, which it commissioned, revealed that 37 per cent of the 14,000 pupils in special needs schools across London – including 292 young people in Hackney – had no history of eye tests.

The charity has run successful pilot schemes in six special schools in the capital, and is calling the issue ‘a major health inequality’.

Six Hackney schools achieve Gold Club status, attaining excellence for their pupils

Northwold Primary School receives a Gold Club status by the GLA

SIX Hackney schools have been recognised as exceptional and awarded Gold Club status by the Greater London Authority.

Launched in 2013, The Mayor's London Schools Gold Club is an annual award, highlighting institutions that have succeeded ‘against the odds’ in raising aspirations and achievement, particularly those with pupils whose attainment has previously been low.

Clapton Girls' Academy, E5, as well as Kingsmead Primary, E9; London Fields Primary, E8; Northwold Primary, E5; Springfield Primary, N16; and St John and St James Church of England Primary, E9, schools were all presented with the award at a

City Hall ceremony on 25 September.

Alison Kriel, headteacher at Northwold Primary School, said: “We are unbelievably proud of our pupils and our staff and it's very, very nice to get such a public acknowledgement of their achievements.”

“We were presented with the award last year too, and we're one of only 15 schools across London ever to have featured on the list more than once. It's been a fantastic opportunity to network with other amazing schools and to host others to help them learn from our successful story.”

For more information about the schools' Gold Club status, visit: www.londonschoolsgoldclub.org.uk

Hackney Homes has employed nine young people via its apprenticeship scheme, which sees the new recruits gain qualifications and earn money

NINE young people have joined a Hackney Homes apprenticeship scheme in a variety of construction and grounds maintenance roles.

Whittled down from more than 130 hopefuls, the successful apprentices, aged between 16 and 18, passed a gruelling application process before learning they had been accepted on to the programme.

They will learn on the job, work alongside qualified staff, as well as attending college to study for a National Vocational Qualification. They will gain practical experience and learn one of a range of trades including plumbing, electrical, gas, multi-trade, and – for the first time since the scheme began – grounds maintenance.

Electrical apprentice, Lucy Ransom, 17, said: “It’s an old fashioned idea to think that the construction industry is only for men. I am excited to begin my career with Hackney Homes and look forward to learning new skills whilst earning money.

“As a female apprentice, I have the advantage of being able to go in to the homes of some female residents who may be intimidated by male workers and make them feel comfortable and at ease.”

James Griffin, 18, the first gardening apprentice on the scheme, added: “When I was younger, I loved to garden with my mum. That feeling inspired me to get into grounds maintenance. It’s an exciting opportunity to learn, meet new people and keep fit whilst at work.”

Currently 10 per cent of the building maintenance workforce within Hackney Homes is made up of apprentices. Since the scheme began in 2002, more than 75 apprentices have been recruited and 85 per cent have gained full time employment.

Cabinet Member for Housing, Cllr Philip Glanville, said: “It’s great to have such a large number of new apprentices, including the first grounds maintenance apprentice.

“It was a pleasure to meet them and to hear the enthusiasm for their roles.”

Young NFL fans play a game of American football in Hackney

AN AMERICAN football team welcomed hundreds of young fans to London Fields to try the sport for the first time.

Residents took part in a game of JagTag, a new form of touch American football, and received free coaching sessions with NFL experts.

The event, which took place over the weekend of 26 to 27 September, was part of the professional American football team Jacksonville Jaguars’ commitment to promoting the game in the UK.

Sergio Brown, Jacksonville Jaguars player, said: “I’ve played football since I was a kid and touch was how I got introduced to the game, so I have a lot of fond memories of it, it’s where my journey began.”

Jay Thomas added: “My friends brought me here as a surprise and I’ve had a really good time because you quickly see what a fun game it is.”

The Jaguars, who are based in Florida, will play Buffalo Bills at London’s Wembley Stadium on 25 October.

Enterprise ‘bootcamp’ launched for young, budding entrepreneurs

15 young people have chance to join an Enterprise Bootcamp

By Dila Tumer

YOUNG people are being offered the opportunity to start their own businesses.

The charity Bootstrap Company and Peabody Housing Association are offering 15 young people, aged 18 to 24, the chance to join the Enterprise Bootcamp scheme and get their ideas off the ground.

Charles Adeyemi, a previous participant, said: “The enterprise bootcamp helped me to clearly define my business in terms of its mission, vision and aims.”

The project helps young entrepreneurs take their first steps by helping them connect with the local creative community.

Participants join a 12-week programme and gain an accredited business management qualification along the way. Young entrepreneurs will also be given free desk space and one-to-one mentoring with a business based in Bootstrap’s Dalston headquarters.

At the end of the 12 weeks, participants will pitch for start-up grants in a ‘Dragons’ Den’ style event.

The deadline to apply is 18 October. For more info, visit: www.bootstrapcompany.co.uk/enterprise-support/enterprise-bootcamp

New day centre to open

BUILDING work is underway on a new day centre that will provide services for adults of all ages who have complex health and social care needs.

It is part of the Council's investment in transforming day services, which will result in the closure of three buildings, with services consolidated into a single hub at Oswald Street, E5.

Due to open next autumn, the two-storey building is being designed in consultation with service users, their carers and families – to ensure it meets the needs of residents now, and in the future – while promoting independence, social interaction and community engagement.

The hub will cater for up to 60 adults a day, offering activities including speech and language therapy, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, Tai-Chi, healthy living and music therapy. There will also be a fully landscaped sensory garden, to benefit people with

“ We are ensuring customers are central to the planning of our service ”

Artist's impression of how the new hub, in Oswald Street, will look dementia and profound learning disabilities, and communal areas where people can relax and socialise. The interior will be easily navigable with colours and finishes chosen to support people with impaired vision, mobility and hearing.

A teaching kitchen will enable people to learn to cook for themselves, while a cafe will offer meals prepared on site by staff. For those who want an outlet for their creativity, a music room will provide the latest technology with other rooms offering access to computers. Fitness and dance classes in a purpose built gym will help to improve mobility.

Alongside the hub, the Council is introducing new services and activities for those whose needs may be better served in their own communities. These alternatives will support adults to pursue interests in education and employment, volunteering and fitness.

People with care needs will still have transportation to and from activities, whether attending the day centre, or accessing community based day services, via a newly commissioned fleet.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: “By providing an in-house service for some of our most vulnerable residents and working with local providers on a new range of community based activities, we are ensuring customers are central to the planning of our service.”

Sam and Annie Cohen Day Care Centre, E5, is set to close on 12 October; while Marie Lloyd Day Care Centre, E8; and Trowbridge Day Care Centre, E9, are due to close next year.

News in brief

Follow five steps to wellbeing

A WEEK of free activities is set to give residents the opportunity to improve their mental health and wellbeing. The ‘5 to Thrive’ week, which runs from 5 to 11 October, will feature a range of events leading up to World Mental Health Day on 10 October. Evidence shows that incorporating five, simple steps into daily life – comprising of being active, giving, connecting, taking notice, and engaging in learning – can help to improve wellbeing.

Funded by City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group, and delivered by voluntary and community sector organisations and the Council, activities include mindfulness sessions, walks celebrating the borough's history, a mentoring information evening, a volunteer fair and sessions in Hackney's libraries.

For more info, visit: www.fivetothrive.net

Become a healthy start mentor

VOLUNTEERS are needed to help Hackney families at risk of having severely overweight children.

Mentors are wanted to support families, with a child aged under five, to feel more confident and motivated to make healthy lifestyle changes.

The move comes at a time when one in 10 children are obese by the time they start school.

Healthy Start Family Mentors can advise parents who are struggling with making healthy lifestyle choices on a budget; fussy eaters; feeling de-motivated and finding it hard to sustain changes; and children's challenging behaviour, especially at meal times.

The charity Family Lives provides regular group and one-to-one supervision and on-going skills development and training for all volunteers. Training is set to take place at Morningside Primary School, Chatham Place, E9, on 6, 7, 13, 14 and 20 October from 9am to 2.30pm. Volunteers are expected to give up three hours a week.

The beautiful game

By Tahlia Coombs

WITH the new football season underway, it's hard to imagine the sport as the new kid on the block. Hackney Archives however has uncovered the story of one local lad, who became known as one of the founding fathers of Italian football.

Hackney's heritage is rich and diverse, with immigrants from around the world settling here, and contributing to our shared history. This story is one of a local man venturing to Europe and making his mark on history.

The story of James Richardson Spensley was first brought to the Archive's attention by Nick Franchini, Chairman of Clissold Rangers FC. His unexpected e-mail told of a Stoke Newington son migrating to Italy and his passion for the sport helping to develop a new footballing nation.

Who was James Spensley and could the resources at Hackney Archives shed light on his life?

The Archives has a specialist reference library that supports the study of the local area. This covers a wide range of subjects from archaeology to books about piano manufacturing; trade directories, maps and an image database, which all provide an insight into Hackney and its past.

There is also access to Ancestry.com, a paid-for resource, free to use in Hackney Archives and local libraries. The website has searchable census records, registration of births marriages and deaths and much more, all of which were used to discover more about 'one of the fathers of

James Richardson Spensley on the football pitch, unknown newspaper

Italian football'.

The census records located James and his family in 1871 (James aged three) and in 1891 (aged 23). Born in Stoke Newington in 1867 to a Northern mother and Congregationalist minister, they are first found living at 2 Lordship Terrace, near Clissold House. Although the grounds would not become Clissold Park until 1889, the still-rural setting of Stoke Newington would have provided James with plenty of opportunity to develop his love of sport.

Despite an aptitude for languages, James went on to study medicine, and in the 1891 census he is listed as a medical student with the family now living at 109 Casenove Road.

Football in England had already become an organised sport, with the establishment of the Football Association in 1863. Locally, the Clapton and District League was founded in 1893, followed by the Stoke Newington and District League in 1900.

James's talent for languages, sense of adventure and new profession saw him leave for Italy in 1896. He worked in Genoa, serving the medical needs of English sailors arriving on coal ships, and soon joined the expatriates Cricket and Athletics club, where he established a football section, a year later.

It would have been difficult to find other teams to play against as the sport was in the embryonic stages with only some activity in Turin, but James still managed to initiate the first ever Italian Football Championship in 1898.

James participated as a player-manager for Genoa and led his team to victory. The following season he switched position from defender to goalkeeper, playing on until 1906.

Two years later, James returned to England, but the Great War of 1914-1918 was on the horizon. James became a Lieutenant in the Royal Army Medical Corps during the First World War, but was injured on the battle field while tending to the wounds of an enemy out of compassion. He died soon after in a German hospital. The entry for James R Spensley in the register of British Subjects deaths on Ancestry.com records his death on 10 November 1915, aged 49, in Mainz, Germany.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sade Etti.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent’s Canal in Shoreditch. Everyone loves going to Nando’s, so why not learn to make your own Portuguese grilled peri peri chicken from scratch? The chefs from Waterhouse tell us how.

Peri peri chicken

Makes 8 portions

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
45 mins

Ingredients

- 8 chicken breasts
- 4 tbsp paprika
- 1 tbsp black pepper
- 1 tbsp salt
- 2 tbsp oregano
- 1/2 tbsp chilli powder
- 7 cloves of garlic
- 6 birds eye chillies
- 1/2 red pepper
- 2 whole lemons (squeezed)
- 400ml water
- 400ml vegetable oil
- 8 squirts of vinegar.

Method

- Finely chop the garlic cloves, birds eye chillies and 1/2 red pepper
- Blend together with paprika, pepper, salt, oregano, chilli powder, lemons, water, oil and vinegar
- Remove the skin from the chicken breasts and place in an oven at a low temperature of 130C
- Bake the chicken for 15 mins. Remove, and switch the grill on
- Add a spoonful of the blended sauce on to the chicken and pop under the grill for 2 minutes. Flip the chicken, apply a spoonful of sauce to the other side and grill for another 2 minutes. Repeat this process 3 times
- After the chicken comes off the grill, put a final coat of sauce onto the breasts and serve.

Waterhouse - through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, income from this enterprise goes back into training programmes across the borough. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open five days a week.

Have your say on re-adopting licensing policy

THE Council wants to hear from residents on its proposal to re-adopt the current licensing policy.

As announced in August, an error was discovered in consultation material about a proposed new policy and it was put on hold until next year.

In the meantime, the Council wants to continue to use the current policy, agreed in 2011, and amended in 2014.

This policy has now been revised to reflect current legislation and remove some of the elements that date the document. References to ‘interested parties and ‘entertainment facilities’ have been removed along with the chapter referring to the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games as a future event.

Any feedback will be analysed alongside consultation responses received earlier this year, between May and August.

A report will be presented to Hackney’s licensing committee on 10 November and full Council on 24 November.

To have your say on the consultation to re-adopt the existing policy, e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk; or send a letter to Freepost Hackney Licensing Service. Responses should be completed by 12 October.

The Council is also set to host a debate later this year, and hopes residents, visitors and businesses will help shape a review in 2016 of a new licensing policy for Hackney, which everyone can get behind.
